CHINESE MASSACRE.

To Take Place Within the Next Twenty Years.

FORTY THOUSAND ARMED CHINAMEN.

What Prince Kung Told a
White Physician Some Thirty Years Ago.

Dr. Czartorski, the eccentric old gentleman who offers every one he meets a pinch out of his snuff box, is one of the best known men in Stockton, and has a large practice. He has traveled a good deal and speaks several languages. In a conversation with a Mail reporter, recently, he told a highly sensational story regarding the future invasion of the Pacific coast by the Chinese. The Doctor's story is given in detail of his peculiar idiom.

AN ANCIENT CLAIM.
"You are probably not aware," said the Doctor, "that the Chinese claim the whole Pacific coast of North and South America, by right of prior possession, but such is the fact. I have it on no less authority than that of Prince Kung. I will tell you the story as it occurred, and you will see that it is by no means improbable. In 1852, I was practicing medicine in Sacramento city, and one day I was sent for to attend a gentleman who was lying ill at the Orleans hotel. When I arrived at the room in which the patient was, I found that he was an intelligent Chinaman, whom I found to be Prince Kung, a man with whose name the American public are very familiar. He was on his way home, after traveling around the world, and had both feet badly swollen by the gout. I got him well in about a week's time, and he made me a proposition to enter his service as physician and companion. The position was to be for life, and I was to have a liberal salary, with little or nothing to do. I accepted his offer, and went to China with him, and remained in his service for three years. He spoke English very well, and had a good smattering of German, French, Spanish, Italian and Latin, and I think that was one of the principal reasons why he wished to have me with him, so that he could perfect himself in those languages, as I speak them fluently. The prince was very well read, and of more than ordinary intelligence, but had many of the weaknesses of the Caucasian. He was passionately fond of champagne, and very partial to burgundy and old sherry, and because of his high living was subject to gout.

THE CHINESE ATLANTIS.
"One day, shortly after we arrived in China, while we were talking about the wealth and natural advantages of the Pacific coast, the prince showed me some ancient maps and charts representing China and America. Instead of an ocean between the two countries, they were united by a broad belt of land, which terminated in a peninsula like Florida, in the location of the Sandwich Islands. The prince assured me that the maps were correct; that there was no ocean between China and America 8,000 years ago, the date of the old maps, which had been copied and handed down from that age to this in the imperial family. He then told me the history of the Chinese conquest of America at that time.

THE CHINESE CORTXZ.
"He said that a celebrated Chinese general crossed the country lying between China and America, and, at the head of an immense army, conquered the Pacific coast, from a point where it was very cold in the south, to a point where it was very cold in the north, and as far east as the high mountains—the Sierra Nevada or the Rocky mountain range. According to the Chinese style of warfare, the soldiers cut the throats of the inhabitants, destroying their cities and dwellings, and carried away whatever wealth was portable. The conquest lasted thirty years, at the end of which time the general returned to China with his army and his spoils. His brother, the then reigning emperor, became jealous of the general's fame and popularity, and threw him into prison. Then a sorcerer, who was a great friend of the general, cut a drain through the territory connecting the two countries, and caused earthquakes and volcanic eruptions, which submerged the land and let the ocean in between America and China. Until late years, the Chinese scholars and historians believed that the whole country of North and South America had been lost under the waves of the ocean. As soon as they found out that the rich country west of the high mountains still existed, they made up their minds to take possession of it again.

A MONGOLIAN MESSAGE.
"The Prince said also that the Chinese have a tradition that the victorious general will visit the earth again, and mounted on a white horse, will lead the conquering armies to America. For this reason they burn a white horse at a certain yearly festival. 'In fifty years from now,' said the prince—this conversation was in 1852—'we will conquer the Pacific coast again.' 'The Chinese can never do that,' I said, 'for the Americans are a brave and warlike people, and are well armed.' 'Poof! Poof!' said the Prince. 'They can do nothing with their army of forty or fifty thousand. I can send four million soldiers there. Listen to me,' he added, 'and I can show you how easily I can do it. They have railroads and telegraphs in the eastern states, and they will have them all over the Pacific coast as well. Our people will build these railroads and put up these telegraph lines, because they can work cheaper than the white men. We will send our people there to do this work, to work in your mines, to cook in your hotels and private families, to work in your factories. They will do all kinds of labor. Well, then, they will get a foothold. They will be all, young, able-bodied men, and will leave their families behind them in China. They will be well armed, and will be scattered all over California. When they reach two or three hundred thousand in number, they will make the attack.'

A NAPOLEONIC MOVEMENT.
"It will be done in the dead of night. The cooks and servants will rise and cut the throats of the people while they are asleep. Others will tear up the railroad tracks and pull down the telegraph poles and wires, so that assistance cannot be obtained from other states. In San Francisco a party of beautiful Chinese girls, dressed as white women and armed with sharp knives, will approach and make love to the sentries guarding the forts in San Francisco harbor, and will take them unawares and cut their throats. Then they will give a signal, and the armed Chinese will rush into the place, cut the throats of the sleeping soldiers, and take possession of the forts.

The torch will be laid to San Francisco, and the thousands of armed Chinese there will slaughter the people. The same slaughtering will be done in every city in the state. There will be none of the whites left but a few old men and women and children, who will be of no account in war. In the meantime a powerful navy, with four hundred thousand Chinese warriors will land in California, and from that point will begin the conquest of the coast where they conquered it before, as far east as the high mountains—the American army, 400,000 or 500,000 men. Why, if necessary, I could send five million men there and sweep them off the face of the earth.

THE SHADOW OF COMING EVENTS.
"I joked with the prince at the time," added the doctor, "and told him his scheme was very chimerical, but I must admit that it looks very practicable now. The Chinese have built our railroads and telegraph lines—the first part of the scheme; they are working as cooks and house servants all over our state, and an uprising such as the prince outlined, is by no means impracticable or impossible. There are about forty thousand Chinamen now in San Francisco. They are well supplied with arms, we know, for I read some time ago of a raid made by some police officers in the Chinese theatre on Jackson street. While they were searching a couple of Chinamen for concealed weapons, the audience dropped their weapons upon the floor. I forget how many dozen revolvers and knives and iron bars the policemen picked up. What is the strength of the militia in San Francisco?" asked the doctor.

"Three regiments, I believe," said the prince. "Allow them the full complement of one thousand men—and you have three thousand men, although I doubt if there are more than fifteen hundred men, all told. The civilians I don't count, because they are practically unarmed and undisciplined, and would do little more than block up the way and impede the militia in the event of a sudden uprising in the night by the Chinese. I don't think it would be a very difficult matter for forty thousand Chinamen to take the city and the forts. Having done this, and having torn up the railroads and prevented telegraphic communication, they could hold the army and navy of the United States at bay until the arrival of the Chinese fleet, which, if the programme were carried out, would be within a few days after the rising."

"Why did you leave the service of the prince?" asked the reporter. "I got terribly homesick. I had nothing to do, and had nothing but Chinamen about me; and so, after being in the prince's service for three years, I ran away, and left ten thousand dollars' worth of property behind me."

"This Prince Kung is the one with whom General Grant hobbnobbed when he visited China?"
"The same man," replied the doctor.—Stockton Mail.

Cataract of the Bladder.
Stinging, smarting, irritation of the urinary passages, diseased discharges, cured by Buchu, St. at druggists, Oregon Depot, DAVIS & CO., Portland, Oregon.

A cough, cold or sore throat should be stopped. Neglect frequently results in an incurable lung disease or consumption. Brown's Bronchial Troches do not disorder the stomach like cough syrups and balsams, but act directly on the inflamed parts, allaying irritation, give relief in asthma, bronchitis, coughs, catarrh, and the throat troubles which singers and public speakers are subject to. For thirty years Brown's bronchial troches have been recommended by physicians, and always give perfect satisfaction. Having been tested by wide and constant use for nearly an entire generation, they have attained well-merited rank among the few staple remedies of the age. Sold at 25 cents a box everywhere.

In the Whole History of Medicine
No preparation has ever performed such marvelous cures, or maintained so wide a reputation, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which is recognized as the world's remedy for all diseases of the throat and lungs. Its long-continued series of wonderful cures in all climates has made it universally known as a safe and reliable agent to employ. Against ordinary colds, which are the forerunners of more serious disorders, it acts speedily and surely, always relieving suffering, and often saving life. The protection it affords, by its timely use in throat and chest disorders, makes it an invaluable remedy to be kept always on hand in every home. No person can afford to be without it, and those who have once used it never will forget their knowledge of its composition and effects. Physicians use the CHERRY PECTORAL extensively in their practice, and everyone recommends it. It is absolutely certain in its remedial effects, and will always cure where cures are possible.

FOR SALE BY ALL DEALERS.
Peruvian Bitters
Cinchona Bitters
The Count Cincin was the Spanish Viceroy in Peru in 1630. The Countess, his wife, was prostrated by an intermittent fever, from which she was freed by the use of the native remedy, the Peruvian bark, or, as it was called in the language of the country, "Quinaquina." Grateful for her recovery, on her return to Europe in 1632, she introduced the remedy in Spain, where it was known under various names, until Linnaeus called it Cinchona, in honor of the lady who had brought them that which was more precious than the gold of the Indies. To this day, after a lapse of two hundred and fifty years, science has given us nothing to take its place. It effectually cures a morbid appetite for stimulants, by restoring the natural tone of the stomach. It attacks excessive love of liquor as it does a fever, and destroys both alike. The powerful tonic virtue of the Cinchona is preserved in the Peruvian Bitters, which are as effective against malarial fever today as they were in the days of the old Spanish Viceroy. We guarantee the ingredients of these Bitters to be absolutely pure, and of the best known quality. A trial will satisfy you that this is the best bitter in the world. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating," and we willingly abide this test. For sale by all druggists, grocers and liquor dealers. Order it. Loeb & Co., agents for Astoria.
